GOLF COURSE UPDATE

GOLF COURSE SUPERINTENDENT - JOHN GLASOE, GCSAA

End of Year Conditions

The holiday season is upon us which means the cooler weather is as well. The bermudagrass will start to head into dormancy and lose its color. In order to preserve our color throughout the cool winter months, we will start to apply the pigments to the fairways. We have also experienced some small amounts of frost (which speeds up the dormancy process of the turf) and it will start becoming more noticeable as we inch closer to the winter. Let us all please do our part to help keep the fairways and roughs as lush as possible now that the turf has slowed its growing process. Staying off weak areas, obeying cart and traffic signage, and using the cart paths whenever possible will all help minimize the wear and tear on the golf course.

As many of you have probably already noticed, we have been working on clearing out areas that have been overgrown that either affect playability or block scenery on the golf course. For example, the waterfall on #18 had been largely covered up; hidden by all the foliage. It is now much cleaner and gives the finishing hole a much better visual background. Some other areas you will notice include #4 before the large green-side bunker, the left side of #7, and behind #16 green. We will continue to clear out the important areas as needed!

See you on the course,

John Glasoe
